Meow! Mio (Ancient Egyptian for Cat) God Within Again Painting by Leah Jurgens

Why a cat? Inscrutable. They purr. I have two. Leah Jurgens captures the spirit of things. This image is mesmerizing. Her prints can be found at the Jazz Gallery. She does do portraits, but do expect them to reveal the essence of you. Her work arises out of the subconscious and flows onto the paper as she paints. The results are psychic if not psychedelic. vjb

SUMMER STORM

A bolt of lightning streaked the sky and 'gainst the hillside flashed,
Then struck again and hit a tree and mightily it crashed.
The rain lashed down in pounding sheets,
the roaring thunder boomed,
The raging of a summer storm
In all its fury loomed.

Ere long the tumulting subdued and rumbled into space,
The sun burst through the passing clouds and poured down on your face.
Shimmering drops of sifted rain – bright iridescent jewels –
Fell into tiny outstretched hands and rippled rain-born pools.

All wonder-wide, your eyes looked up to where the storm had been
And saw an arch of colors there,
the first you'd ever seen.
So young were you, that summertime,
The day must have seemed odd . . .
Or did you sense, my little one,
your first insight of God?

AUGUST OFFERS A ROTATION FROM "ENDINGS" TO "BEGINNINGS".

Situated at the "end" of summer and stepping into the "beginning" of the Autumn Season, a time of transition. It is said that by paying attention to life choices and mystical guidance in August, you may find direction and strength of character. The sunlight of this month greatly illuminates the dark areas of our interior and eliminates that which negatively slows down our personal development. Hope you make the most of August. Be outdoors. Appreciate corn on the cob and new crops of apples. Sit in a comfortable chair and just admire the trees. Thank them for their summer shade and wish them well as they settle into their Fall and Winter restful sleep.

MY MEMORIES OF AUGUST OFFER THESE VIEWS OF LIFE IN MILWAUKEE DURING AUGUST.

First, it was HOT. This was the time of running through sprinklers. Washing the car often turned to water fights, with the hose being marched away to the side yard by my older sister when our arguments broke into her serious work of being the oldest.

Next, "Wisconsin State Fair". It was mandatory to walk through ALL the animal barns prior to doing anything else... like eating a cream puff or getting free stuff in the building with interesting items for sale. One fascinating demonstration was the man who cleaned a Fair-goers eye glasses with a mist that guaranteed they would not fog up when entering a warm building. Amazing!

Finally, back to school. Summer was coming to a close; even the Park swimming pools and the school playground games had 'Closing Dates' posted. Summer essentials like beach balls, towels, sand shovels were boxed up. Even the sand box "sand" was shoveled into pails for use on icy sidewalks. Then late August brought the serious planning by my parents for "school supplies". I remember overhearing, "but does she really need new socks too!" or "his pant legs are 4 inches above his ankle, of course he needs new pants." But being "Back to School" ignited intense excitement as I anticipated new teachers, old and new friends, more active, interesting days.

Lorraine

The State Fair

Some time in the late 70's my wife suggested I enter the Wisconsin State Fair baking competition. I had baked a few loaves of quick breads which had found favor. And so it was decided I'd give it a try. The days before the entries were to be submitted and judged were filled with the clatter of loaf pans, the odds of raw ingredients, and the joys of baking in hot, humid August weather without benefit of air conditioning. I insisted on fresh loaves only, never frozen, as some bakers did. At last I had found a recipe to adjust to my wishes, as every entry needed to be "original". I duly appeared on "judgement day" to witness the judge's decision. The judge cut the loaf in half, smelled it, checked the appearance, crumbed the inside, and only tasted it at the end. My humble loaf of "Inga's Quick Bread" had won the blue ribbon to my delight and the surprise of my esteemed sister contestants. And so it is I am published in one of the Wisconsin State Fair cookbooks.

Stuart

I think of August as a herald for the harvest and preparations for the coming fall and the coming year while enjoying and being in the fullness of summer.
Roger

August to me is still the height of summer! Still hot! Harvesting corn, state fair, time for more lake swims, first apple picking, festivals everywhere!
Susan

I think of Cicadas. The song of the heat of summer.
Vince

My grandpa's name was August. He played the banjo.

I see pieces of him in members of our family.
(Oh, you meant the season containing August.)
Well, he did season us.
Very interesting sense of humor had he.

My mind will not let a month of the year Surpass what August means to me.

Everybody called him "Gus"
Tonia

Happy New Year!

The month of August boasts the birthdays of four presidents: Herbert Hoover, Lyndon Johnson, Bill Clinton, Barack Obama and me! All but Lyndon Johnson are Leo sun signs.

When I was in grade school I missed being able to bring birthday treats to my class and having everybody sing "Happy Birthday"! But my 16th birthday made up for all those years.

I started babysitting, my first job, when I was in 5th grade. By the time I got to high school I was well experienced and regularly babysat for the neighbor's two kids, Kenny and Joann. So easy! They lived right next door. So I was the Roader's' tried and true baby sitter. The kids loved me and we all loved those famous TV dinners.

When Mr. Roader learned of a work conference in St. Petersburg, he decided to make it a family vacation and take me along as their baby sitter. WOW...I was ecstatic! All day in the pool honed my swimming and diving skills. I actually did a backward flip off the low diving board (I still can't believe it!)

The highlight was getting to pick from the motel's book of restaurants, the one where I wanted to have my birthday dinner. From the photos especially and my studying Spanish, I chose a Spanish restaurant in Tampa. It had several dining rooms from casual to fancy. The fancy had a huge water fountain in the middle of the room. That's where I wanted to have dinner. It was beautiful, cloth napkins fancy and a trio of violins/guitar serenading at tables and singing Happy Birthday to me. I ordered the Pompano dish. It was an absolutely delicious white fish and I haven't had it since. Nothing tops that birthday dinner!

I couldn't remember the name of that restaurant for this sharing, so I asked my sister's friend who lives in Tampa. Because of its expense, she goes only a couple times a year and loves their paella! And it is: "Celebrating over 117 years, the Columbia, Gem of Spanish Restaurants, 1905." My return to that restaurant is on my bucket list. I'll end with the ditty my Auntie Sylvia would recite at all our family birthday gatherings: "We have birthdays, we all have birthdays too. But the whole world is happier when there's a birthday for you." Eileen

Woodland Pattern throws a “Brunchraiser”
 SUN. AUG. 13 | 11 am–2 pm CDT | $Give What You Can ($50+)
 *IN PERSON* at Bar Centro (804 E. Center St.)

Join Woodland Pattern for a brunch and help raise funds for two recently launched initiatives supporting teens and younger adults—the Milwaukee Youth Poet Laureate program and the Milwaukee Emerging Poet Fellowship.

Hosted by Peg Karpfinger at Bar Centro and its adjoining corner event space, Woodland Pattern’s Brunchraiser will feature elevated brunch canapés from Allie Boy’s Bagelry & Luncheonette as well as gourmet popsicles from Pete’s Pops, perfect for pairing with Bar Centro’s cocktail menu.

“Bring back my poets!” Woodland Pattern has given ten poets and artists a design challenge for the “Poetry Catwalk.” While this line-up is sure to slay on the runway, everyone is invited to participate in the Ball. You are invited (commanded) to dress as your favorite poem and tip your favorite performer for a little friendly competition.

The Brunchraiser will also feature a silent auction, live music, a DJ set, and various party games.

Tickets are “give what you can,” starting at $50. Sponsorships that include tickets and other benefits are also available. Purchase tickets by August 7.

Just between us, squirrel friends . . . it’s bound to be the event of the summer!

Historic boat will visit Milwaukee to promote peace

The Golden Rule, a storied sailboat that helped bring about an end to atmospheric testing of nuclear weapons, will stop in Milwaukee Friday, September 1 through Monday, September 4 as part of a 15-month, 11,000-mile voyage to inform and educate the public about the dangers of nuclear weapons proliferation.

A number of public events will be held, and speakers / crew members will be available for presentations at schools, churches or other venues during the four-day visit. Boat tours and visits with the crew will be offered every afternoon.

The 35-foot wooden sailboat will be docked at Lakeshore State Park, on the downtown lakefront between Discovery World and the Summerfest grounds. It will tie up at Discovery World for the first day, Friday, Sept. 1, and be in a slip at Lakeshore State Park Sept. 2-4. Free boat visits and tours are offered 1-4pm daily. On Saturday, Sept. 2, a party in the park featuring folk musicians will run from 2-5pm. September 4 is Labor Day, and the Milwaukee Area Labor Council is encouraging people who attend Labor Fest to visit the nearby boat.

The Golden Rule began its trip on the Great Loop route in September 2022 on the Mississippi River in Minnesota, sailing to the Gulf, and circling the south and east coasts before reaching the Great Lakes this summer. It will make more than 100 stops.

In 1958 a crew of Quakers sailed the Golden Rule from Hawaii towards the Marshall Islands, intending to protest and interfere with atmospheric nuclear weapons tests, although that voyage was halted by the government and the crew arrested. As a result of this highly publicized mission and public outcry about the radiation blowing around the world, President Kennedy signed the Limited Nuclear Test Ban Treaty in 1963. The Golden Rule action inspired many peace makers and peace ships that followed, including Greenpeace.

Golden Rule was in private hands and sunk, but was rescued from a watery grave in 2010 and restored to her former beauty by Veterans For Peace and others who support her new mission: to promote a nuclear free future, to educate about the dangers of radiation to humanity and the environment, and to support peaceful alternatives to war. The current voyage is a project of Veterans For Peace, with its local visit sponsored by Milwaukee Veterans For Peace and a dozen other peace and justice organizations.

NEIGHBOR SPOTLIGHT: The Mighty Ms. Erica

In the beginning was The Blues.

by Ellen C. Warren

Starting around the age of two or three, “My mom said I always just sang, sang, sang all the time, through the house,” says Ms. Erica Johnson. “My dad was a record collector of the Blues. There was always Muddy Waters or KoKo Taylor going on in the house. Every day! I can just remember always loving the Blues.”

She sang in a couple school productions in middle school and at the High School of the Arts and then took a long break from performing, other than to respond to an occasional request for a funeral. Around the age of twenty-six, after lots of schooling, living, loving, and a couple kids, her cousin wondered why she wasn't singing. There was an R&B band that was looking for a female vocalist. “Give it a try,” he said, “if you don't like it you can just say you gave it a try.”

And she did. For three months she sang with Phase Two without a real gig “doing a lot of R&B -- Whitney Houston, a lot of ballads, a lot of Anita Baker.”

When the band's keyboardist told her a blues band was trying to find a female singer she thought, “Ah, that ain't really for me. I grew up on that, I don't want to sing the blues. I liked to listen to it, and I loved it, but it just wasn't what I wanted to sing.”

Still, when she heard from The Bedroom Doctor and he asked her to audition, she went.

Not really knowing what they'd want to hear, she prepared to do a ballad. Instead, when she got there, he asked her to sing “Clean Up Woman,” a well-known blues standard.

Before she finished the song, she was hired. Three practices a week and lots of gigs, including for the AM1290 Christmas Party, kept her with the band until James Tatham (Footh) of the Misfits heard her singing karaoke. “Something is really distinctive about your voice!” he told her. “If I ever need a female singer, I'm gonna call you.”

The opportunity came quickly. Starting with a couple weekly gigs, as well as playing blues spots all over, Erica sang all the songs she remembered from her youth, “making them (her) own.” In 2010 Erica got married. Around the same time Footh decided to end the Misfits. But it was only a few months before she was putting up an ad at Cascio's, looking for a new band. Brew City Rhythm and Blues brought her on for a few years which led to five years of being a Blues Disciple.

“Then,” explains Erica, “I felt like I was sort of stuck in this same kind of music ... I can do a whole blues set, but there's always a few people in that audience that are not blues lovers. So, you gotta mix it up.”

“Blues is really touching ... but sometimes you need something that kind of snaps you back out of that ... the blues, all of it ain't sad but all of it has a story that relates around hurt. So, I said, I want a band where I can sing some things that make people happy ... Let's switch it up! Let's have some fun!”

The Mighty Ms. Erica and The Sound Production is that band. Backed by four super-skillful musicians, Erica is playing a mix of blues, soul and r&b in venues from clubs to Locust Street Festival to Summerfest to the Harley Homecoming. A little Clean Up Woman. A little Gladys Knight. “I do a lot of Tina Turner ... It's kind of been like my thing. At the end everybody's waiting for me to do Proud Mary,” she says. “I always end my show with it.”

You need to see this dynamo in action on stage! But before you go, get your hair done by her. Because, yes, this is only one part of Ms. Erica. She's also a business owner. Close to twenty years back, she took her Cosmetology License and opened a salon in Wauwatosa on 68th and North.

When she needed to move her shop, she found a spot in Riverwest that had been a garage space. The architect's design ended in it being a near replica of her first shop. The cozy, chic salon, London's Healthy Hair, has been at 610 East Clarke St. for nine years now.

By appointment only, Erica and her daughter, Rashon, are the two stylists. Rashon, who is twenty-seven, has been helping out at the London since she was fourteen. She apprenticed under Erica for Cosmetology and got her Instructor's License, like her mother. Erica has also been teaching Hair in the Cosmetology department at MATC for the last four years.

A multi-faceted achiever, Erica Johnson also holds Bachelors Degrees in Criminal Justice and Education. She is planning

Jackie Robinson,
My Grandmother and Me

By George Paz Martin, reprinted in memory, August 2023.

Recently, (in 2007) news headlines commemorated Jackie Robinson's 60th anniversary of breaking the racial barrier in major league baseball. To America generally, Jackie Robinson's legend was not only being the first Negro to integrate major league sports but also of being one of the greatest baseball players ever.

To Negroes at that time, Jackie Robinson was very special our own national hero, our own colored champion. We, descendants of slaves, were called Negroes or Coloreds then, Black later, and African Americans today.

Life was hard for Negroes in racist America with few reasons to celebrate our own people. Our last heroes were World War II era champions; Jesse Owens of the University of Illinois who won Olympic gold medals in track in front of Adolph Hitler; and Joe Louis, the Brown Bomber, who won the World Heavy Weight Boxing Title from the German, Max Schmeling - making them America's heroes too.

After World War II, baseball was America's game. It was played in every community in our country, and the veoes had been denied. My essay won and then Alderwoman Vel Phillips presented me the award as my grandmother lovingly watched.

My grandmother loved Jackie

Robinson. He meant so much to Negroes, not only as one of the best players in previously segregated major league baseball, but also as a national role model. He was a four-year letterman at UCLA and an Army Lieutenant in World War II. He was mild mannered, humble, and showed exemplary behavior while playing in Canada for Montreal before coming home to America and playing for the Brooklyn Dodgers.

We all read about his achievements in the sports sections of the daily newspapers across the country. Negroes followed Jackie Robinson in the colorful pages of our Ebony and Jet magazines that we bought at the news stand on 3rd and Wisconsin Ave.

Many Negroes like my grandmother, who previously had no interest in baseball, now listened on the radio and flocked to see Jackie Robinson and the Dodgers when they came to their local major league ballpark. It felt so good to cheer for and celebrate your champion, another Negro.

Jackie Robinson not only brought a good glove and bat to America's game, but he took base running to a new dimension with his speed and cunning, becoming "King of the Base Paths." Jackie Robinson, the first Negro in major league baseball, became its "Most Valuable Player," and won hearts all across America.

My grandmother grew up listening to the radio for entertainment, especially programs from Radio City Music Hall in New York City. When possible, Odessa would tune the radio to Dodger's games to cheer Jackie, often while she was on her knees scrubbing someone else's floors for minimal pay.

My grandmother loved me and wanted me to see one of the most important people in her lifetime. I'll never forget the day that she took me to see Jackie Robinson and the Brooklyn Dodgers play the Cubs at Wrigley Field in Chicago.

On a cool, cloudy summer morning, we left my house on East Garfield and took the Holton Street bus downtown to the Greyhound Station, then at 2nd and Michigan Streets. As a first grader at Palmer Street School, I was so excited about the trip to Chicago. My grandmother bought me chocolate milk, which I remember was so cold that it made me shiver on the three-hour bus ride.

It was a beautiful summer day by the time we got to Wrigley Field. We were both astounded by the biggest building and the most people that we had ever seen. I held my grandmother's hand tightly as we moved through the crowd trying to find our seats.

It was also the first time my grandmother had been to a major league baseball game. Negroes didn't really go to these games until Jackie Robinson played, and now we were here, my grandmother and me.

Stadium ushers directed us around the huge building and down a short tunnel. As we walked out of the tunnel, we were in the heart of the ballpark right behind home plate with the manicured infield and shimmering green outfield, surrounded by tens of thousands of people in the tall grandstand behind us and down the base lines to right and left field connecting in the outfield bleachers.

As we stood awestruck, a nearby usher asked us if we were in the right section, implying that we couldn't afford to be there. This upset my Grandmother Odessa and she grabbed my hand, nervously shaking. She gave him our tickets and with a quivering voice told him politely but very firmly that she had paid for the best seats so that we could see Jackie Robinson. The usher then bowed to her and proceeded to lead us to the first row, behind home plate on the first base side, to our two seats, the best seats in the ballpark.

Looking back, I would have expected that our tickets would have been for seats in the bleachers because of the cost. I often wonder how long my grandmother scrubbed floors to pay for those tickets. My grandmother loved Jackie Robinson and me.

We watched batting practice and when Jackie Robinson approached the batter's box, the fans gave him a thunderous applause. Watching him practice, I studied him swing his bat level, roll his wrists, make contact with the ball, follow through level and maintain good balance. Later, I was inspired to imitate his technique as I played ball as a kid at the Boy's Club near 15th and Center Streets and as an East Town Bat at Kern Park on Humboldt and Keefe Avenue.

During the game, I remember seeing Jackie hit the ball and immediately blur past us with unbelievable speed to first base. As the Cubs pitched to the next Dodger batter, all of a sudden Jackie rocketed down the base path and stole second base.

Everyone in Wrigley Field, including Cubs and Dodgers fans, and Negroes across the country listening to their radios, gave him a standing ovation. My Grandmother Odessa and I were there behind home plate cheering our champion and looking at him standing tall on second base with a humble smile on his face.

Barnacle Bud's

1955 S. Hilbert St.
414-481-9974
Hours: Open daily, 11am-9pm
barnaclebuds.com

When you want a taste of the nautical life, pay a visit to Barnacle Bud's. The setting falls somewhere in between a Florida dive bar and what you find at a Wisconsin lake resort where the smell of the water mingles with the sounds of boats docking. At Barnacle Bud's it doesn't get much better than a frosty Blue Moon with a slice of orange served at a picnic table on the deck while you watch the sunset outline the skyline across the river.

Your GPS can direct you to this Kinnickinnic River riverside paradise, but if you tend to be directionally challenged, you might appreciate this short tutorial. At the north end of Kinnickinnic Avenue in Bay View, turn east on to E. Bay Street and then turn left on Hilbert Street. When Hilbert becomes a bumpy mess that's more like a dead-end alley than a street to somewhere, keep going. You will eventually arrive. Because Barnacle Bud's shares a parking area with Skipper Bud's, mind the signs. If you don't have a permit, you could be towed. The threat is real. And here are two more housekeeping details; Barnacle Bud's does not accept reservations; your dog is not welcome at the table.

Since 1992, Barnacle Bud (McKiernan) and his wife Victoria have dished up seafood in sandwiches and baskets. As a longtime customer, I can give the grouper a rave whether it is served in the Traditional Fish Fry, in a Po Boy Sandwich with spicy mayo, in a Build your Own Sandwich, or combined with coleslaw and Swiss in a Grouper Reuben. Over the years I've opted for the Grouper Fish Fry. Nothing has changed except the price. The grouper has a light, crisp, tempura-like batter that keeps the fish moist and retains its mild flavor.

At a recent lunch, while I raved about the deliciousness of my grouper, my companion had a like experience with the catfish and its cornmeal crust. Both dishes came with fries, rye bread, and mild creamy slaw, classic components of a fish fry.

We noted the walkway to the back section of the restaurant where you can sit under the shade of a roof. With no guardrail to prevent an unexpected dive into the river, this passage could be a challenge after a few Blue Moon brews.

You won't run out of choices on the extensive menu. You can get a Big Dog with onions and relish, Gene's Big Boy Burger, the Classic, with lettuce, tomato, American cheese and 1000 Island sauce, Cajun Crawfish Tails over rice with spicy garlic butter, Jambalaya over rice with chicken or shrimp, or, a Lobster Roll, with or without the roll.

You will also find a Surf and Turf on the menu, a delicious combination of a perfectly charred medium steak topped with four plump grilled shrimp, along with baby potatoes, garlic bread, and salad. There was enough on the plate for a share because my companions also ordered Clam Chowder, only available on Fridays. It was thick, full of clams, and included bits of celery for extra flavor and crunch. It also had enough heat to wake up your mouth and to keep it interesting.

From Appetizers, my friend and I shared two Crab Cakes. They were served with coleslaw and spicy remoulade sauce, a classic complement that enhanced the flavors in the crab cakes.

If I had to pick a favorite from many meals at Barnacle Bud's, it would be the Po Boy Shrimp Sandwich. This one is for shrimp lovers. The chef overflows the bun with more than a dozen juicy shrimp coated with spicy mayonnaise. A side of sliced jalapeno adds more fire if you are up to it. For the Grouper Po Boy, the fish is grilled, an equally tasty sandwich if grouper is your choice.

In addition to the wine and beer selection, there's a Moscow Mule with vodka and ginger beer; the Dark and Stormy, ginger beer and rum; and Victoria's Cooler with pear vodka, cranberry juice and lemonade. If I order something especially spicy at lunch, the non-alcoholic, sweet, tart lemonade is my drink of choice.

If you want dessert, order the Key Lime Pie. It's sweet, tart, and covered with whipped cream. It tastes as good as it looks.

I return often to Barnacle Bud's because it is a place where I can anticipate a cold one, good food, attentive friendly servers, and a front row seat to a memorable sunset.

There is still some commercial shipping on the Kinnickinnic River. If your lucky you will see a ship from St. Mary's Cement cruising down the river.

Editorial

by Vince Bushell

People have been asking me to do stories on various issues.

Climate change (got kids? You should be worried for their future).
 Increased bus service - not less
 Expansion - Downtown Street Car line.
 Funding for Milwaukee County Parks
 Safer Streets
 Controlled access to firearms.
 Education, College, Debt free

And for me : Stop the insane freeway expansion. Yes I have a car, but I avoid the freeway system with a passion. I do not need more lanes. It does not serve those of us who live in the city.

America is "Car Hell"

I think that is the short list. These issues are public issues. And it comes down to public funding. Who controls the purse at the state level? Well we do have a Democratic Governor. That is because the whole state gets to vote for Governor.

But the State Legislature, both Assembly and Senate is controlled by the Republican Party.

Why when we have an election that includes the whole state, Democrats can win? But the State Senate and Assembly are solidly in the hands of the Republican Party.

The answer is in the grip of the monster on the left side of this page, District boundaries for Senate and Assembly Districts that are Gerrymandered to fix the elections so that their party wins.

Lines are redrawn every 10 years after the census is taken.

Yes and Democrats deserve some of the blame for the present situation. In 2009 the Democrats had majorities in the state legislature and were in power in the Governor's office. And they failed to pass nonpartisan redistricting legislation

In 2011 Republicans in the WI Legislature drew the most gerrymandered voting maps in the country,

In 2021 maps were submitted by the Peoples Maps Commission. The GOP passed their created maps despite fervent protest. The Governor vetoed them.

The following court battle resulted in the Wisconsin Supreme Court allowing the GOP's gerrymandered maps for the 2022 election.

The information about unfair maps is provided by the Wisconsin Fair Maps Coalition. They are devoted to ending Gerrymandering.

In April 2023 a WI Supreme Court election resulted in the election of a new judge that supports fair maps.

Eventually, re-litigation by the State Supreme Court may move Wisconsin on the path of Fair Maps.

Voting districts should be made without political parties drawing the maps.

I know this was an issue in 1812 and is an issue now. Democracy demands that elections are not slanted by closed door political maneuvering that plagues Wisconsin's voting maps.

You may not agree with my goals, but it is hard to disagree that political parties should NOT be drawing district boundaries. It is legislators picking the winner not the voters.

It looked a little like a Salamander and was proposed by Gerry Mander and became the infamous Gerrymander.

The Gerrymander Song

Gerry, Gerry,
 Give us your answer do
 We're half crazy
 All for the lines you drew.
 It won't be an easy process
 With way too many bosses
 But we'd all look neat
 Upon a seat
 In a State made for me and you
 Gerry, Gerry,
 Give us your answer do
 We're half crazy
 All for the lines you drew.
 Our State has been stuck at the gate
 Too few laws passed was our fate
 Let's all cross the aisle
 With smiles not with snarls
 Redraw lines not more red than blue
 Gerry, Gerry,
 Thanks for your answer true
 We're no longer crazy
 All for those lines you drew.
 With new lines we can work together
 Our State will function better
 And we all look so neat
 Upon our seat
 In Wisconsin for me and you

ORIGINAL VERSE and tune of:

Daisy, Daisy
 Give me your answer do
 I'm half crazy
 All for the love of you...

The first "gerrymander" was drawn on a map and signed into law on February 11, 1812. Elbridge Gerry, then governor of Massachusetts, signed into law a redistricting plan designed to keep his political party in power in the upcoming election. Upset that the Federalist Party was critical of James Madison's foreign policy, Gerry signed the reapportioning plan that heavily favored his Republican party. Gerry, a man who staunchly followed his principles even against the popular actions of his colleagues, was hesitant to sign the law. The Republican legislators sponsoring and forcing through the bill redrew "voting lines so that the Federalist vote was concentrated in a few districts, while the Republican vote was spread over many." The redistricting authorized by Gerry won 29 seats for the his Republican party, whereas the Federalists won a puny 11 seats.* Gerry's district of Essex was a particularly odd shape, long on one side and curved along the north end. ### And Now for Something Completely Different

House of R.A.D. to host Steamroller MKE, a fundraiser for Anchor Press, Paper & Printing

What: A printmaking / live art extravaganza using a steam roller as a printing "press"

What else: Food trucks and Amorphic Beer to fuel you up. Non-alcoholic things, too.

When: Saturday, August 5, 12 noon until 8 pm

Where: the courtyard area outside of House of R.A.D., 900 E. Keefe Avenue (at the "T" with Bremen Street)

"As long as people are making art and collaborating, I'm happy," said Steve Sorrentino in describing his role in helping produce this month's Steamroller MKE event. Steve is head of Thunderbird Creative, a brand development and integrated marketing firm. He studied fine art and printmaking at M.I.A.D. before he did a stint in the corporate world and eventually merged his interests and experiences to create innovative, community-building projects to further the arts and help small business folks.

Sorrentino teamed up with House of R.A.D.'s Brandon Minga to get Steamroller, uh ... rolling. (R.A.D. stands for resident, artist, doer.) House of R.A.D. is home to over 50 artist studio spaces and to AP3, Anchor Press, Paper & Print, a non-profit, community-based print shop. Steamroller MKE is a fundraiser for AP3 and promises to turn folks on to the coolness of all different types of printmaking and even paper making.

Brandon Minga, House of R.A.D.'s founder (along with Tim Priebe), is a long-time doer of awesome stuff and maker of awesome art. He's also a M.I.A.D. alum, and works in branding, identity, interiors, murals, live painting, video, commercial art, and sculpture.

For the Steamroller MKE fundraiser, more than 20 local and regional artists are creating original woodcut blocks that will be used to make large scale prints on paper or fabric. A rented steam roller will serve as the printing press. An original piece from each of the artists will be auctioned off, the proceeds going to help support Anchor Press, Paper & Print (AP3).

The idea is to get "local artists, businesses and educators together to celebrate and amplify the arts and expose local residents, students and professionals to creative entrepreneurs and career pathways," according to a press release from Sorrentino.

Sustainable Style: My Search for Sustainable Fashion in Milwaukee

By: Alyssa N. Salcedo

With the social consciousness of sustainability on the rise, many fashion brands are changing the ways in which they produce and distribute their clothing. Consumers are also growing more concerned with the ethics behind their clothing choices, and many are making a commitment to shop sustainably. I set out on a quest to find stores in Milwaukee that are making a commitment to sustainability. My journey led me to find several stores across Milwaukee that curate collections of pre-owned and vintage clothing that cater to a variety of aesthetics, interests, and fashion trends.

as consumers can have a huge impact, if we can encourage people to get into industries or work in industries where they are reducing the negative impact on our planet, why not be part of that?" The idea to host a repurposed fashion show began with the Center Street Daze Festival, but will now be a recurring event. Smart shared that she hopes to host many more repurposed fashion shows in the future during different seasons. Aside from promoting sustainable practices, Smart hopes to celebrate body diversity in the fashion show. One complication that arose when planning this event was being able to find a diverse group of models to walk in the fashion show. Smart was not able to find enough volunteers that reached her goal for diversity, but she was

Boutique 801,

801 E Center St. Hrs. Sat. and Sun. 12:30 to 3 pm.

Boutique 801 is another store committed to sustainable practices in Riverwest, holds a collection of both second hand and vintage items. The store owner, Anita Terrell, collected pre-owned and vintage clothing all her life and always had a goal of opening her own store. Terrell explained that "I'm a shopaholic, I have a lot of clothing, jewelry, and accessories to share." Terrell originally collected clothing items for donation, but eventually decided to open a store back in August of 2018. She decided to open her store in Riverwest because of the community and popularity of the area.

All of the inventory in her store is sustainably sourced. Terrell doesn't search for specific pieces, she looks for clothing that's in good condition and doesn't really follow a specific aesthetic when curating her collection. Terrell also doesn't exclusively look for vintage items, she sells clothes from all time periods, making her store a place where anyone can find something that they like, regardless of their personal style. Whatever she finds that isn't in a good enough condition to resell gets up-cycled and made into a new piece. When asked whether or not she believes that fashion is a form of artistic expression, Terrell replied "Yes! That's the reason why I love Riverwest, you see lots of artistic expression and flair in this area. That's what makes it a great place to be!"

forMartha 825 E. Center St

Open during pop-up events including Center St. Daze

My journey began in Riverwest with the upcoming Center Street Daze Festival on Saturday August 12th which will host a variety of vendors and events. A local non-profit and intoxicant free event space in Riverwest, forMartha, will be hosting a repurposed fashion show during the Center Street Daze Festival. This fashion show will consist solely of pre-owned and upcycled clothing, with looks put together by community members. If community members wish to style outfits for the fashion show, they must make a commitment to only use repurposed clothing. Shawnette Smart, one of the directors of forMartha, wanted to create a fun and inclusive event while simultaneously promoting the sustainability movement. Smart believes that it is our responsibility to take the steps that we can to reverse the grave jeopardy that our planet is in. Smart believes that no step is too small, she shared "the choices we make able to combat this by using mannequins that represent different body types that will be dressed and posed on a runway for the show. Smart hopes to find enough models for the upcoming fashion shows and is encouraging Riverwest community members to apply. In addition to the fashion show, forMartha hosts a recurring pop-up shop in their event space. This pop-up shop consists of repurposed, upcycled, and vintage clothing for people of all shapes and sizes. Smart shared that the main goal with the pop-up shop is to "Help people to uplift their own self image through their unique expression. We get a lot of that here, when people shop here it's almost like they're playing dress up...I find it really exciting to be part of a movement that allows people to be their best selves." If you are looking for an inclusive space in Riverwest where you can shop sustainably, consider paying a visit to forMartha's pop-up shop and intoxicant free event space. Additionally, you can participate in or view the upcoming repurposed fashion show at the Center Street Daze Festival.

Bandit MKE

Is located at 1224 E Brady Street, Hours Closed Mon., Tue to Sun. Noon to 8pm.

Bandit MKE sells vintage clothing dating back to as early as the 1940s, but takes much of their inspiration from both the 80s and 90s. Owners Michelle Eigenberger and Liz Kiesling were both long-time collectors of vintage clothing and decided to make selling vintage clothing their full time jobs back in the summer of 2020. Eigenberger and Kiesling decided to combine their collections and sell vintage clothing out of their backyard during the start of the pandemic. Their store began as a monthly pop-up shop but they decided to open a permanent location when they found a space on Brady Street. This was where many of their original customers from the pop-up shop were located. The space used to be a radio station, but they were able to renovate it and turn it into a vintage store with Kiesling doing much of the interior design herself.

Now Eigenberger and Kiesling are selling vintage clothing both in store and on their online storefront. They collect clothing from estate sales and flea markets, but a large portion of their collection is bought, sold, and traded from the community. Eigenberger shared that, "our goal is to stay away from fast fashion and preserve garments that have traveled throughout time... The store helps to connect the community through clothing." Therefore, their collection consists mainly of vintage clothing with many unique pieces that have been collected by community members over the years. When curating their collection, Eigenberger and Kiesling keep their customers in mind, stocking their store with items that their customers have expressed interest in, as well as eras in fashion that speak to them the most. No matter what your personal style is, or what time period in fashion speaks to you the most, Bandit MKE has something for you.

SayWerd, (like SayWord, got it!)

3474 N Oakland Ave,
 Thur, Noon to 6pm. Fri. 11 to 8pm.
 Sat. 11 to 8 pm. Sun. 9 to 5 pm.

Is a vintage clothing store that caters to those who wish to find items ranging from the late 80s to the early 2000s. The owner, Benny Tralongo, started his career reselling a variety of different items when he was just ten years old. Motivated by a desire to start his own brand, Tralongo created an original clothing line in 2015. Tralongo started selling his original pieces and in 2017 he later integrated vintage clothing into his collection. In 2020, Tralongo officially opened his store right before the start of the pandemic. When curating his collection, Tralongo draws inspiration from his childhood. He searches for items inspired by his childhood interests, for example old cartoons, comic books, sport teams, anime, video games, and many more. He also searches for items inspired by both graffiti culture and skating culture. Tralongo shared that he doesn't usually look for big labels or brands, he aims to stay true to what he grew up with. Tralongo stated, "If you want to step into a place that feels nostalgic, this is the place... I like when people come in and feel connected to the collection. I wish I had a store like this when I was a kid." When asked about the way in which his store makes a commitment to sustainability, Tralongo explained that all of the inventory is vintage and pre owned, except for the clothing in the SayWerd original line. However, he often looks for blank vintage or pre owned items and up-cycles them with the SayWerd logo to be sold in the store. Each year Tralongo creates a couple of SayWerd original collections, but most of the vintage collection is sourced on online auctions or bought, sold, and traded directly from the community. Additionally, Tralongo runs a clothing drive each year in December that is largely dependent on donations. He aims to make his store and his collection accessible to people of all backgrounds. When asked whether or not he believes that fashion is a form of artistic expression, Tralongo replied "one hundred percent, yes! It's one of the most responsive and relative forms of artistic expression."

Amara studios,

2625 S Greely Street, Suite 100, .
 Hours Mon-Tues: Closed
 Wed-Fri: 12-6 PM ...

This Bayview Studio is a highly curated vintage store that takes inspiration from luxury brands as well as runway and streetwear fashion. Store owners Sheila Teruty and Madelyne Strunse aim to fill their collection with on trend and high fashion pieces. Teruty and Strunse take inspiration from brands and fashion designers like Calvin Klein, Dolce & Gabbana, Vivienne Westwood, Maison Margiela, Rick Owens and many more. Teruty and Strunse designed a desired aesthetic for the store, and filled their collection with pieces that they feel fit that aesthetic. They release collections of clothing after spending extensive time hand selecting each piece that they include with each release. Their collection has a modern and trendy feel, while simultaneously maintaining sustainable practices in their business model. They commit to selling used or gently used vintage clothing, ensuring that at least ninety percent of their inventory consists of second hand clothing. If the quiet luxury aesthetic inspires you, Amara Studios is the perfect place to find both everyday staples and statement pieces that will help to elevate your style.
