Neighbor Spotlight: Andre' Lee Ellis

by BB Bishop

An idyllic summer Saturday morning on a quiet block of West Reservoir Street, not far from the hustle and bustle of Fond du Lac Avenue, is a setting that itself tells a story. Apple trees laden with ripening red and green fruit adorn homeowners' yards. Next door to Bethany C.O.G.I.C. lives a proud veteran. One house over, a plaque on the porch quietly beckons those seeking shelter.

The doors of the District 5 fire house, now a MFD training site, are up, revealing within workout apparatus, as well as the curious glow of LED plant lights.

In the center of a manicured community garden, lays something distinct amongst the flowers and foliage—a labyrinth.

At the gate to the CAGE, Community Agriculture Growing Experiences, visitors are greeted with confident handshakes and complete introductions. The young men are both eager and serious, and their leaders emerge quickly to offer a tour. At the grill, the boys are throwing down at a pop-up barbeque stand, wrapping up another weekly shift at the garden. As they get ready to break for lunch, a casual circle gathered around "Earth Father" Andre' Lee Ellis listens intently.

CAGE is the brainchild of Mr. Ellis, a Milwaukee legend, whose acting and directing career have brought him almost as much fame as his dedicated work in the community.

The CAGE is not just another specimen from Milwaukee's crop of neighborhood gardens that have spouted all over the last decade. Within it, the young men participating in the targeted program are developing leadership and personal growth skills from intentional hard work and a circle of role models.

CAGE Board president Dezzy Lovell explains the nature of the program, which has been tailored to strengthen young men with its structure and mentorship. Lovell emphasizes the importance to young men of having male role models and a strong support network, especially to those whose family or neighborhood support systems may be challenged.

About half the boys here are voluntary participants, attracted by peers who spoke highly of the program, but a number are engaged in the justice system. Now in its third season, CAGE has seen scores of young men benefit from the program, which runs as long as the growing season. Ellis has successfully posited CAGE as alternative to sentencing, provided the participant completes the program successfully.

As they arrive Saturday mornings, the expectations at CAGE apply equally to each participant. Those arriving late are not allowed to work their shift. Standards of conduct transcend etiquette. The team's tactics to build inner confidence in young people include financial literacy seminars, and a tuxedo walk.

For over ten years, "Pops" as he is known to the boys, has been conducting the walks. They originated during his tenure at We Got This!, another successful community garden Ellis founded in 2013. Located just a couple miles away, the co-ed program still serves a multitude of neighborhood school-age children.

Each young man participating in the walk is sponsored, and participates alongside mentors in a modern male rite of passage. Besides receiving the suit, a haircut

WE ALL BELONG
A Campaign of MICAHA
PROTECT DEMOCRACY
REJECT WHITE CHRISTIAN NATIONALISM
BUILD THE BELOVED COMMUNITY

by Vince Bushell

As I approached the Rally for Democracy sponsored by MICAHA (Milwaukee Innercity Congregations Allied for Hope) at the Zelazo Center at UWM, I asked to pay the admission fee. Many had prepaid and I wanted to pay and add a donation to MICAHA. Cash.

The woman volunteer looked at me, and rather than going through the process of phone linked paying. Got me a rubber band and placed it on my wrist.

“WE ALL BELONG”, it proclaimed and she told me to put cash in the donation table inside, and I did. And I was glad to belong.

The program was set to go on for hours.

At least 4 hours. That is a long time but the room was full and it all began with a Latino youth music group and a Kaasumai African Dance Company. A joyous, positive way to start a program.

Three women began the “heart of the matter”, Janan Najeeb, Director of Milwaukee Muslim Women’s Coalition. Now I cannot begin to sum in text what these women said. Strong voices condemning hate oriented speech hiding behind the name of White Christian Nationalism. Beware the false lamb of God hiding racism and selling oppression in the name of Christ.

Now it is not wise for MICAHA to proclaim White Nationalism, Christian or any other brand and link it to the Muslim faith.

The BJC, Baptist Joint Committee, will take on the task as the source of this hate is found in Christian churches.

Rev. Jennifer Nordstrom, Senior Minister at First Unitarian Society of Milwaukee, my beloved church, added to the heart of the matter. And Beloved it is. Without love we fail. And introduced Amanda Tyler.

Amanda Tyler, BJC, Baptist Joint Committee, and founder of Christians Against Christian Nationalism began to define the term.

She began by noting that the Kassumai African Dance Company that helped open the rally was not to be found downtown at the Republican National Convention. For me the blend of song, dance and musicians that occurred at this rally was inspirational, delightful, and entertaining.

Later reveal of the male pastors preached in the inspirational style of Dr. Martin Luther King. But the main theme here was delivered by the women. Glory to them.

I cannot give you a record of Amanda Tyler’s presentation, but I can send you the message created by the organization she founded. She did quote Dr. King:

“The church must be reminded that it is not the master or the servant of the state, but rather the conscience of the state.”

White Christian Nationalism
Defined by the BJC

As Christians, our faith teaches us everyone is created in God’s image and commands us to love one another. As Americans, we value our system of government and the good that can be accomplished in our constitutional democracy. Today, we are concerned about a persistent threat to both our religious communities and our democracy — Christian nationalism.

Christian nationalism seeks to merge Christian and American identities, distorting both the Christian faith and America’s constitutional democracy. Christian nationalism demands Christianity be privileged by the State and implies that to be a good American, one must be Christian. It often overlaps with and provides cover for white supremacy and racial subjugation. We reject this damaging political ideology and invite our Christian brothers and sisters to join us in opposing this threat to our faith and to our nation.

As Christians, we are bound to Christ, not by citizenship, but by faith. We believe that:

People of all faiths and none have the right and responsibility to engage constructively in the public square.

Patriotism does not require us to minimize our religious convictions.

One’s religious affiliation, or lack thereof, should be irrelevant to one’s standing in the civic community.

Government should not prefer one religion over another or religion over nonreligion.

Religious instruction is best left to our houses of worship, other religious institutions and families.

America’s historic commitment to religious pluralism enables faith communities to live in civic harmony with one another without sacrificing our theological convictions.

Conflating religious authority with political authority is idolatrous and often leads to oppression of minority and other marginalized groups as well as the spiritual impoverishment of religion.

We must stand up to and speak out against Christian nationalism, especially when it inspires acts of violence and intimidation—including vandalism, bomb threats, arson, hate crimes, and attacks on houses of worship—against religious communities at home and abroad.

Whether we worship at a church, mosque, synagogue, or temple, America has no second-class faiths. All are equal under the U.S. Constitution. As Christians, we must speak in one voice condemning Christian nationalism as a distortion of the gospel of Jesus and a threat to American democracy.

Conflating religious authority with political authority is idolatrous and often leads to oppression of minority and other marginalized groups as well as the spiritual impoverishment of religion.

EDITORIAL SUBMITTED BY TERRY HANSEN

The Wisconsin Supreme Court recently ruled that absentee ballot drop boxes can again be used in our state. Democrats contend that unmanned drop boxes make voting more accessible, while Republicans believe the decision encourages voter fraud.

Congressman Tom Tiffany (R-WI) claims the ruling is “effectively legalizing anonymous ballot box stuffing” and “opens the door to potentially fraudulent activities.”

And Brian Schimming, Chairman of the Wisconsin GOP, refers to the decision as “a setback for both the separation of powers and public trust in our elections.”

Yet according to the Brennan Center for Justice: “Voter fraud related to ballots sent by mail or placed in drop boxes is extremely rare — so rare that multiple analyses have shown that it is more likely that someone will be struck by lightning than commit mail ballot fraud.”

Regarding voting by undocumented immigrants, House Speaker Mike Johnson (R-LA) has argued: “We all know, intuitively, that a lot of illegals are voting in federal elections. But it’s not been something that is easily provable. We don’t have that number.”

The reason for Johnson’s inability to quantify this is quite simple -- the problem doesn’t exist. As the Cato Institute explains, “Noncitizens don’t illegally vote in detectable numbers.”

Continuing in this evidence-free zone, Heritage Foundation President Dr. Kevin Roberts recently stated that he would accept the results of the 2024 election “if there isn’t massive fraud like there was in 2020.” His view is consequential because Roberts is also the chair of Project 2025, a detailed plan for Trump’s second term.

When confronted with the Heritage Foundation’s own study finding just 1513 cases of voter fraud in the U.S. since 1982, Roberts explained that this is “Because it’s very hard to document and the Democrat Party is very good at fraud.”

This fanciful posturing by Republicans regarding widespread election fraud is reminiscent of White House Chief of Staff Mark Meadows’ strongly held belief that Italian satellites changed votes in the 2020 election.

The absurdity and inbuilt immunity from evidence characterizing many of the GOP’s election claims brings to mind a story told by the late comedian George Carlin: “While I was out, beings from another dimension entered my apartment and replaced everything with identical items.”

It’s clear that there are significant doubts about election integrity among the US population largely because of the false narratives relentlessly pushed by former president Donald Trump and his followers.

Please remember that Trump accused Senator Ted Cruz of fraud in the Iowa Caucuses, said he wouldn’t accept the results of the 2016 election unless he won, never accepted that Hillary Clinton won the popular vote, and said months ahead of the 2020 election that the only way he could lose is if the election is rigged.

Let’s heed the words of democracy watchdog organization Freedom House, from its report Democracy in Retreat:

“President Trump has assailed essential institutions and traditions including the separation of powers, a free press, an independent judiciary, the impartial delivery of justice, safeguards against corruption, and most disturbingly, the legitimacy of elections.”

Loren and Kolin at the CAGE

Pastors' blessings and Mississippi memories.

and steak dinner, the lessons along the way are ultimately more valuable. Learning how to purchase and wear formal apparel, what their walk and posture communicate about their person, and what to expect in a fine dining restaurant can inspire a young person to visualize beyond the streets.

It takes a village. Besides role model volunteers like Lovell, a successful local entrepreneur, the cadre of promising young alumni who are now in mentor roles are also joined by elders from the community.

Recently, the ministry team of Friendship Missionary Baptist Church adopted CAGE for its outreach ministry. Initially their support focused on financial contributions. On this summer morning, the presence of three visiting pastors graces the CAGE. They are sharing invaluable words and stories with the youth.

First hand accounts of the violence of Jim Crow in the South are becoming more rare these days. Pastor Rev. James Hughes recalls growing up in his hometown of Belzoni, Miss. As a child he viewed Rev. George Lee moments after he was shot in his vehicle in 1955. Not long after, being one of the first students to integrate in the area, he describes the threats and extreme harassment which would cause the family to involuntarily leave and head north.

“They wouldn’t take the rent or my father’s car note,” recalls Hughes. There was no way to stay even if the shotguns and threats had been bearable.

Recollections of growing up down South are robust with descriptions of farm life and a youth spent primarily outdoors--the superiority of the catfish, having to butcher the family hog they used to ride. For many families, growing their own food stopped after the Great Migration.

While beautiful, a primary purpose of the CAGE garden is the feed the neighborhood with fresh produce. Their current goal is to donate 100 lbs. of fresh food to the local community each month. To boost its growing power, several indoor hydroponic growing units have been donated by the agriculture tech start-up ForkFarms, out of Green Bay.

Garden leader Loren Knox oversees the hydroponics project, which is sponsored by Bader Philanthropies. Loren explains that at capacity, each pod can generate as much as 25 lbs. of produce monthly. After extensive training on the hydroponic system, he is now managing the production cycle, and understands the nuances of the light schedules and nutrients required to sustain starts and microgreens, which will be a focus in cooler months. Currently, Knox and the crew are germinating an assortment of vegetables for a second summer planting: green beans, cucumbers, basil and lettuce.

In addition to its other program goals, Mr. Ellis waxes poetic about the benefits of an improved diet, especially salads and greens in the lives of growing young teens: “You eat fresh, you grow stronger.” He won’t hesitate to stop and remind the boys to take in the beauty of some growing lush collard greens still misted with morning dew.

Impressively, Knox knows the varieties surrounding the labyrinth, whether garden herbs or native perennials to attract pollinators. The circle here is a beautiful example of what is generally considered a tool for self-transformation. Walking the maze almost always requires vulnerability, a powerful trait, especially so in young men.

On this day, as Friendship’s Head Pastor Joseph Jackson, Jr. visits, he shares his own experience with labyrinths and spiritual contemplation. He and Ellis end up reciting the Max Ehrmann prose poem Desiderata. Whether the boys will think back and appreciate anything about today except that they sold a few hot dogs is uncertain, but if anything rubs off from these notable elders it’s a gift.

Jeremiah Thompson, who like Knox has been under the wing of Mr. Ellis for the last decade, has taken on a leadership role at CAGE that befits his current CV of not only mentor but entrepreneur, licensed contractor, and supporter of nonprofits. He has been involved in the in the Riverwest co-housing project which promises to soon see revitalization, and he splits his time between businesses in Milwaukee and Chicago.

Other alumni casually stop by the CAGE as the day progresses, to check in and visit with Pops. Just listening to conversations and stories of their own early adolescence, the younger men can absorb wisdom. Whether it’s about overcoming hurdles such as arrests and unstable home situations, or about taking a cue from Ellis and making an impact at a young age, hearing about these wins evokes inspiration.

While some of the boys on supervision are held to a strict schedule, come noon, Pops has time to check in on his flock with one-on-one conversations. Knowing these kids, where they come from, and their personal situations, he is able to respond to their challenges with an emotional water can. Nurturing, whether from strong, stable young men or wry elders who occasionally break into song, is happening here at the CAGE, everything and everyone growing strong.

I recently had the pleasure of dining at Sage located at 2900 S Kinnickinnic Ave. The restaurant was formerly White House, but the building still retains its name and historic charm. Owners since 2019 Allison and Zachary Meinhardt said the transition from White House’s formal french dining experience to Sage makes the place feel more approachable. The rebrand also came with an exciting addition– a second floor gallery open whenever the restaurant is. I’d eaten at White House before and, driving past the corner often, was curious when a neon sign popped up in the window. The inside is now moodier, dark green accented with deep colored florals. The beautiful wooden bar is still the centerpiece reminding you that the place was built in 1890. The rebrand works– the space feels hipper while retaining its charm. The cocktails were a standout. Allison herself worked the bar and was meticulous. I had the ‘Sage’ a mixture of Korbel, egg white, lemon and simple syrup served with a fresh flower garnish sprinkled in edible glitter. I enjoyed my drink in the large backyard garden. There is nothing more summer than a beautiful drink accompanied by the soft setting sun.

It felt romantic, even as I dined alone. A date, a friend, or an upscale happy hour would be good at Sage, too. For my dinner I started with Burgundy Escargot. Wild caught snails served in a ramekin topped with a light butter sauce and toast on the side. I ordered this only because it seemed lavish and indeed it was. If you’re worried about the snail part– don’t be. It was delicious. My main dish was a fungi ricotta. It was decadent, almost too much given my appetizer. The pork belly with sake, soy, and sesame served over a spring salad seemed delightful, too. The dessert menu was unique, featuring several cocktail inspired treats. The sparkling float made of Cava and melon intrigued. In the end I went for the crème brûlée topped with a berry compote and a sprig of lavender. It did not disappoint. Inside I toured the gallery featuring three local female artists. The space is available to rent for events. When I’d asked Allison, a painter herself, what brought her to the White House in 2019 she said, “It’s a long story. But basically I fell in love with the building.” The love rings through the thoughtful menu and creative reinvigoration of a historic neighborhood landmark. For Riverwesters and Milwaukeeans alike, it is worth stopping by.

Gogol Meets Chagall at the Jewish Museum Milwaukee

Chagall’s Dead Souls
A Satirical Account of Imperialist
Russia -June 7-September 8, 2024
1360 N Prospect Ave.

by Darlene Wesenberg Rzezotarski

This is a show worthy of your time— Two monumental creatives of their eras meet in a perfect melding of text and image. Curated by the museum’s Molly Dubin, the works are from the UWM Art Collection. Bring your bifocals if you need them! Detailed text and etchings demand close observation. Indulge yourself in the gift of time, too. The text and images will reward you with their combined voices, speaking truth to power with humor. Voice 1: Nicolai Gogol. Here is a short man with a big nose and a loud voice, physically and metaphorically. Rooted in the Ukraine, his father instilled pride in his Cossack blood. Empowered by the written word and armed with the outsider’s gift of observation, Gogol was able to regard Russian society in 1842 with cutting-edge satire. (For context, this was six years before Wisconsin gained statehood) The iron-handed Tsar Nicholas I kept the empire in check, its feudal system holding thousands of serfs in bondage to corrupt landowners. The Tsar levied burdensome taxes; a serf who died in the year of taxation still had to be claimed as living property. Gogol’s sarcasm and acerbic humor tumble magnificently across the page. Voice 2: Marc Chagall. We know him best for his fractured, floating depictions dripping with bittersweet memories of his Hassidic Belorussian village, Vitebsk. Here he first beheld the world in 1887. An outsider like Gogol, he headed for St. Petersburg to seek his artistic fortune. Eventually his wanderings took him to Paris, where he was commissioned in 1923 by art connoisseur Ambroise Vollard to illustrate a special edition of Gogol’s Dead Souls, by then acknowledged for its genius. Each piece in this show is paired with a matching passage from Dead Souls. By 1926, Chagall had created 96 illustrations masterfully using the techniques of etching, dry point and aquatint.

Voice 3: Pavel Ivanovich Chichikov: This Iconic con artist and enterprising swindler is Gogol’s creation. He travels across Russia visiting equally greedy and conniving landowners offering deals they can’t refuse. He buys the burdensome “dead souls” on their tax rolls, thus lowering their tax bills, while enhancing his status as the owner of many serfs. On his travels, the picaresque Chichikov confronts outlandish characters, going wherever the road takes him as long as it ends up at a nobleman’s estate. Chichikov becomes a vehicle for Gogol’s views on societal hypocrisy.

Tragedy and humor exist side by side--the sharp tongue, the quick rebuke, the glib, gladhanded deal –whatever thinking on his feet demands at the moment. Will he be victorious? Yes, and no. He gains paper wealth; but since this was envisioned as Part One of three novels, Gogol never allows Chichikov to end his journey. Voice 4: You, the Viewer. The exhibit invites involvement. Stations are provided for written response connecting the work to present-day societal issues. What similarities does our world share with the tsarist world of Imperial Russia? Does a corrupt society make swindlers of us all as a necessity of survival? Observe the universal foibles of humanity through a different lens. Sit and watch the accompanying video. Pause to offer your response in conveniently placed notebooks. Take advantage of ongoing community activities at the museum in August. (Check their website for details.) Voice 5: Yours truly, the Reviewer. I offer a personal note here. I had read Dead Souls in school, but it was one of many required reading books on a syllabus and I was more interested in my GPA than in learning. Now I have reread at leisure with more contextual understanding. Paired with Chagall’s etchings, it has become a work of Living Souls. The show offers a glimpse into another age that in many ways isn’t very different from life today; our world situation with AI deception and unscrupulous on-line hucksters adds another arena of complexity. I find myself playing a game: Who’s my favorite character? The winner is Madame Sobakevich. Gogol describes her as being “long like a cucumber with a habit of washing her hands in picklebrine.” She might be your neighbor. You know—the one whose sprawling cucumber vines have crept into your cosmos. Chagall totally understood! I hope you will find your own favorite unions of text and image that you will carry home with you, laughing and crying. Madame Sobakevich

Riverwest Radio: Broadcasting Live From the RNC

by BB Bishop

The voice of nearly two million union members, via Pacifica Radio Network, joined forces with WORT 89.9 FM, the Isthmus, and Riverwest Radio 104.1 FM to broadcast coverage of the RNC live from Riverwest.

In a historic effort for the station, comprehensive coverage with hosts from all three stations came together for live coverage.

Bob Hennelly, veteran labor journalist of the Pacifica Network, WBAI of New York joined Calli Pittman of Madison’s WORT and Keith Gaustad of Riverwest Radio in the first broadcast, launching the live commentary.

Initial interviews started with the team of reporters in conversation with the protesters at Red Arrow Square on the first day of the convention.

With the world watching, and listening, Riverwest Radio had the opportunity to elevate their coverage with technical assistance from WORT and professional journalism from Pacifica and the Isthmus.

From 5-7pm, they aired special coverage from the convention floor, interviews taken earlier in the day with locals and protestors on the ground and sessions with special guests about the issues at play.

Reporting also included coverage of the well-attended rally held by MICAHA at the onset of the convention week against Christian nationalism. The event was held at the UWM Peck School Zelazo Center For Performing Arts Center to accommodate the large attendance.

The Reverend Al Sharpton was originally scheduled to headline the event, but his visit to Milwaukee was moved up in order to give Dvontaye Mitchell’s eulogy. Thankfully, other pastors from MICAHA delivered, including its president Rev. Dr. Richard Shaw and Rev. Greg Lewis, who later joined the reporters in the studio for a live interview.

As the Executive Director of Souls to the Polls, Rev. Lewis gave valuable insight into what motivates a large percentage of Milwaukee’s voters to turn out as well as to select a candidate.

“The major issue, is people just don’t understand their (own) power.”

Per Pacifica and WORT, focus on choosing guests was to “include diverse voices that reflect the 85 million low-wage and low-wealth voters that constitute a third of the American electorate, but have historically been left out of the national political conversation.”

Pacifica Radio Network’s membership is supported by “sustaining sponsorships from unions representing close to two million rank and file members.” According to its website, it was founded in 1949 as a visionary alternative to commercially-driven media. Riverwest Radio is a Pacifica radio affiliate.

Microplastics Abound

August 2024 7

By Kim Lamers

Plastic has made our lives easier to manage, but it has also impacted the environment, animals, and humans significantly. There is a fine line of what we would do without roads, clothes, and food storage packaging and the potential effects that it could have long term. It's safe to bike with a plastic molded helmet on especially if you crash, yet that helmet never biodegrades when it is placed in a landfill.

The origin of plastic dates back as early as 1907 when the first synthetic (no natural material) plastic was invented. Nylon was invented in 1935 during WWII as it was used for parachutes as a form of synthetic silk. Plastic was used extensively during the war for things like aircraft windows and its lightweight and pliability made it appealing. Fast forward from the date of invention, researchers began to notice the accumulation of plastic in the oceans in 1960 and started studying the impacts of plastic on the environment.

Today the terms microplastics and nanoplastics are talked about frequently and research is being done on the impacts of them on human health that is not yet conclusive yet scientists and doctors are finding microplastics in human blood, tissue, and plaque in the carotid arteries of subjects in research studies to name a few parts.

So what is the definition of microplastics and where do they come from? Microplastics are tiny broken down pieces of plastic that are less than 5 mm and nanoplastics are much smaller. Forbes magazine said that about 400 million tons of plastic are produced per year. From that plastic particles are getting in the food we eat, the air that we breathe and the water that we drink. Unfortunately, microplastics are nearly everywhere. Microplastics form when disposed plastic breaks down and things like single use bottles, plastic bags, food packages, auto parts (tires), toys and other items are a large source. There is also microplastic in some personal care products that we use like some toothpastes and face washes for example.

One source that contributes to microplastics in the environment that isn't always talked about is synthetic clothing. Clothes that are made of polyester, fleece, acrylic are some of the contributors that cause 35% (the largest percent) or microplastic release into the water and environment. When these clothes are washed and dried tiny plastic fibers get leaked into the water and the air.

Some ways to decrease the emission of synthetic fiber microplastics is to buy cotton clothes and to put your wash in bags that catch the plastic. You can also do larger loads of laundry less often and wash in cold water. Some areas of the world are selling washing machines that filter out the plastic pieces, however they are more expensive and legislation has been placed in those areas to promote these developments. It can also help to dry your clothes on a close line or buy clothes second hand. It would be helpful if less clothes were made with synthetics as well because it has been found that a single load of laundry can release several million microfibers. These fibers don't all get removed at the water treatment center so the sewer sledge released as a result goes onto the soil as pesticide and gets into the food we grow.

Dr. Raffael Marfella is doing a study that is getting much attention in the press. He studied the plaque from carotid arteries of 250 subjects and found that 60% of those he studied had microplastics in their carotid arteries. They are continuing to research to see how that impacts cardiovascular disease and strokes in these subjects.

If you are wondering what food has been found to have the highest level of microplastic in it the answer is shellfish.

An organization that you can find online is Plastic Free Milwaukee. They are working to try and reduce single use plastic and promote lake friendly restaurants that do not use single use plastics. A list of those restaurants are below.

It's been a challenge in Milwaukee to get a ban on plastic bags like other states have done. We still have a long way to go in finding plastics that are more recyclable or that biodegrade.

The purpose of this article is to raise some awareness and get you to think about what impact you can try to make for yourself and others in the plastic realm. It also is an encouragement that you get out and vote and do your research.

Kim Lamers, BSN, RN

Nanoplastics are so small they cannot be seen with a standard microscope. Nano particles are measured in billionths of a centimeter, Micro particles are measured in millioths of a centimeter.

In a small café at the corner of 60th and Vliet, they cook with local ingredients as much as possible, and if you like classic dishes in a café setting, you will be delighted with this restaurant. There are more or less a dozen tables and a bar where customers also eat and drink. On a recent Friday, we noticed a rollicking group at the bar and learned from our server that they are TGIF regulars.

It is a café, so along with the usual coffee selections, there are a couple of unusual concoctions: a Grasshopper; a Turtle Mocha; a Mexican Mocha; and a Caramel Royale. There is also a short list of adult beverages such as a Loaded Bloody Mary, An Apple Whiskey Old Fashioned, a Vliet Street Margarita, and a Blue Daly, vodka, blueberry iced tea and lemonade. Also on the drink menu, there is a basic Mimosa, a Beermosa, Spotted Cow and orange juice, and a Peach Mango Mimosa.

You might have a hard time deciding on what to order for lunch when you see the tempting choices on the menu. My Short Rib and Grilled Cheese filled with plenty of beefy meat, melted pepperjack, and smoky onion marmalade, was rich, spicy, and juicy. The onion marmalade pulled all the flavors together into one big messy sandwich. My companion's Black and Bleu Burger topped with fried onions, thick-cut bacon, and melted blue cheese, hit all the right notes, funky, fatty, salty, and a little sweet from the fried onions. The chef turned this one-half-pound of ground steak into something superior to an ordinary burger. Another companion ordered the Chicken Salad Sammie on whole wheat. The filling overflowed the toasted bread and the accompanying onion rings were delish.

For vegetarians there is a Veggie Burger, barley, lentil, and a portobello mushroom patty on a brioche bun with roasted red pepper aioli. There are also more sandwiches and wraps including a Tuna Melt and a Reuben. All the burgers, wraps, and sandwiches are served with house made chips or onion rings. You will not want to leave a single chip or ring behind.

If you prefer a salad, you can order Chicken Caesar Salad, avocado and blueberry topped with a grilled chicken breast, or Walnut Chicken Salad with green apple, blue cheese, and walnuts, and dressed with an apple vinaigrette.

We found the café crowded on a Sunday morning. It is truly a neighborhood place where locals gather. We saw babies, toddlers, grandparents, young couples, and everywhere, smiles and laughter.

At brunch, we bypassed the House Specialties, Avocado Toast, Crepes, and Chilaquiles, and instead chose the more traditional Veggie Omelet, Corned Beef Hash, and Biscuits and Gravy. The three egg Veggie Omelet filled with spinach, broccoli, onions, green beans, cauliflower, and carrots, was a flawless feast of veggies. The eggs were almost superfluous. The Corned Beef Hash was generous, with more meat than potatoes and enough for another meal at home. For the Biscuits and Gravy, the chef drowned two flaky biscuits with sausage gravy. Because I could, I added chorizo gravy to one of the biscuits. It was mild with a slight hint of spice and like the corned beef in the hash, there was a generous serving of sausage and chorizo in the gravy.

Highlands Café is a gem. I can't wait to return and I will, soon.

What fruit has a thick yellow skin covering a soft white inside? BANANAS, of course! They are full of potassium that helps prevent muscle cramps. If you are playing a sport for a long time or exercising hard, it is good to eat a banana. Bananas also have fiber to help you poop. Some say that they can give brain power, increase happiness, and help in times when life is hard. Bananas are good plain or with peanut butter or in a fruit salad.

Don't forget to work your muscles every day to get strong. Go bananas for healthy eating and exercise!

Concerned property owners at the Falcoln Bowl question the proposal of a NID for Riverwest. Stoney Rivera (not shown) asked that residents be allowed to raise questions before proceeding. Questions about NIDs, BIDs, street repairs or public art? Write us: vbushell@riverwestcurrents.org

A proposed NID, Neighborhood Improvement District failed to win approval at the first meeting held on July 2nd. at the Falcon Bowl. Over 100 people were in attendance at that meeting.

A NID is a city neighborhood with defined boundaries, such as Riverwest, that request a tax be levied on all properties in support of neighborhood improvement projects.

This NID would be run out of Riverworks with a resident board approving projects.

The proposal could be raised again in the future if citizens organized and lobbied for the program.

It seems there is some interest in establishing a Riverwest Neighborhood Association, similar to one we used to have years ago.

A Neighborhood Association can be established as a non-profit and apply for projects such as a NID, if desired.

Riverworks runs a number of programs for Riverwest and Harambee.

Ruth Weill lives in Riverwest and sustains a number of programs for us: Including the 4rh of July parade and celebration in Gordon Park and the Riverwest Farmers Market on Pierce Street on Sundays thru October. Ruth is an employee of Riverworks.

Thank you Ruth for all the work you do for our community.

Riverwest ia a activist community with many things happening. It is a happening place. This month the Center Street Daze will happen again. Ruth also coordinates this street festival.

Protect checks and balances in our state constitution.

On August 13, you can protect checks and balances in our state constitution. Political insiders and special interests added two deliberately confusing constitutional amendments to the August ballot. Their goal is to take advantage of a low turnout election and confusing language to change our constitution—getting rid of checks and balances that ensure fairness and representation for all Wisconsinites. You have the power to stop this extreme power grab by voting NO on both constitutional amendments.

Vote NO on questions 1 & 2 on or before Tuesday, August 13.

Eliminates checks and balances: These Amendments eliminate checks and balances by trying to trick voters into giving away sole power of spending these federal funds to the legislature. Currently, the governor and legislature work together through the state budget process to decide how to distribute most federal funds.

Blocks emergency response: These Amendments could slow or block funding for emergencies that require urgent help—like a flood, a bridge collapse, or a pandemic affecting people or livestock. During a crisis, communities can't afford delays caused by requiring legislators to go to Madison to vote or the political gridlock and fighting over how to spend federal funding.

More gridlock in the Legislature: These Amendments would lead to more gridlock in Wisconsin's unproductive legislature, which has been one of the most extreme in the country. When hospitals and first responders needed funding, they didn't pass a single bill for six months. This year, the legislature blocked money to clean toxic chemicals from our water and blocked settlement money to address the opioid epidemic.

Deliberately confusing: These Amendments were designed with deliberately confusing language and are the first Constitutional Amendments ever put on a low-turnout August election ballot. The special interests that wrote these Amendments don't want Wisconsin voters to understand them or have their voices heard.
